Excerpt: .page 185 of the 8th vol. of the Society s Transactions, is described another case of destruction of the posterior wall of the stomach by the gastric juice; it is there recorded as an example of post-mortem solution--that being the usual explanation of the phenomenon, though most likely not the correct one--and it is recorded of that infant, that she never had diarrhoea, which was the parent s report at the time; but upon subsequent inquiry I have learnt that she had frequent green stools, though she was never ill enough to require medical treatment, and therefore in the parent s estimation she never had diarrhoea. Mr. Ballard, 11th of May, 1859. II.--LIVER AND ITS APPENDAGES. 29. Primary Encephalo id Disease of the Liver. A. B., set. 53, admitted to the Infirmary of Marylebone on the 5th of November, 1858, and died on the 7th of January, 1859. She had long been a surgical nurse, and appeared to have poor health at all times. Since death, it was discovered that she had been a confirmed opium eater for twenty years, taking latterly as much as a drachm of the crude drug daily. At the post-mortem examination, the liver was found to be greatly enlarged, weighing six pounds, encroaching considerably on the right thoracic cavity, extending downwards to the right iliac fossa, and compressing the stomach as it occupied the left side. Superficially, the entire surface was seen nodulated with whitish masses about the size...
