The Dispensary occupied on the 18th of January, 1890, a single apartment in a Broome-Street tenement, and accommodated a resident physician and three students. It was not associated with any medical school, and was dependent for its income upon the generous gifts of its friends. It had no patients, and there had been no demand on the part of the medical student for such an opportunity as it was proposed to offer him. At the present time nearly the whole of a five-story tenement has been absorbed for the uses of the Dispensary, and its medical staff has increased until now it consists of a resident physician, three assistants, and twenty students, together with two trained nurses. The number of patients has increased to an average of five per day, and the applications of students...
