Discovery Publishing House Pvt. Ltd., 1998. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. Searchshakhapatnam refinery disaster of September 1997 was the worst industrial accident of the 1990s. The Bhopal gas tragedy of 1984 was the worst-ever such accident in the History of process industries. India, thus has the dubious distinction of setting two World records in the realm of industrial accidents within a span of 13 years. Indeed, during the last two decades India has witnessed thousands of industrial accidents involving fires, explosions, toxic releases or combinations of these. The experience of the rest of the developing world is similar - with increasing population, industrialization, and number of hazardous chemicals/process, the frequency as well as severity of industrial accidents is increasing. Why is the situation in the Third World Countries particularly grim? In these Regions it is common to find several Industries clustered together, with towns and villages lying in close proximity. Even when an industry sets itself up some Distance away from populous areas, the griming neighbourhoods soon REACH its periphery. In such settings the impact of industrial accident on human lives as well as Property is always severe. How to deal with this situation? Attempts to Search for answers to this question have given rise to the field of risk assessment in chemical process industries (RACPI). Finding ways and Means to prevent accidents, and to cushion the damage if accidents do occur, are integral parts of this new Science of RACPI. The Government of India has acknowledged the hazards of Bhopal like accidents posed by chemical process industries and has made it mandatory that all industries conduct elaborate risk assessment. Apart from being in the interest of public welfare, risk assessment is also extremely important for the welfare of the concerned industry because accidents can damage the industry`s Infrastructure causing enormous...
