LESSON TALK. Introduction: Saul Anointed King. Samuel s experience as ruler convinced him that Israel s only hope was in a leader who would inspire the confidence of all the people. His own sons could not do this. So he looked around for some one to draw the people together. He finally found a young man named Saul, the son of a wealthy man of the tribe of Benjamin. (I. Samuel 9:1-10.) Saul had been sent by his father to look up some young asses which had strayed away. He went to Samuel, thinking that he might give him some information about them. The moment Samuel saw Saul he recognized him as a young man he had heard much about. He was tall and fine-looking. Samuel was at once attracted to him and invited him to dine with the chief men of the town. His modesty and intelligence convinced Samuel that here was the man he was looking for. After the feast he invited Saul to be his guest for the night and the next morning he went with him to the gates of the city. Then he told him the Lord had appointed him to be King over Israel and anointed him from a vial of oil he had taken with...
