She answered not, but sat, as I found her, in silent confusion. Albert, without noticing my entrance, again gave a hurried glance at the book. Volume second, and a mark placed towards the close of it! He stood for a moment, evidently much annoyed, and then said, Well, Sybil, my only consolation on this occasion, must rest upon those words of the. Apostle-- To the pure, all things are pure-- and therefore trust, that to your mind the foul things written within this book, are nearly as harmless, as the passage little Mary has just read, appears to her innocent mind. But pray, dearest, send this dirt from the house directly--Dirt! I wish it were as innoxious--dirt may be washed away,...
