Our limits do not permit us to speak either of its terms or of the manner of its execution. This we may do in a more extended work. stipulated by the treaty of peace. This is a mistake. She has, indeed, lost a degree of her national importance. Her pride has been humbled, her vanity has been rebuked, her false position has been exposed and realized, and some of her people have fallen in battle; in these mortifications and visitations, her sufferings have been great. It is right that they should be great. It is natural. It is just. Wrong doing is corrected by pain and suffering. Great benefits are guarded, by severe penalties, whenever and wherever violated or abused. The changes to which Mexico has been subjected, are for her good, her gain. She has ceded a portion of that territory to which she has proved false. Like the steward in the parable, she hid the talent that was given her to be improved, and made no interest. It was a territory that gave her no income, and to which she could afford no protection. She had proved her incapacity to develop the treasures of her soils, her forests, and her mines. She rested upon that beautiful region of the earth an incumbrance. She was idle, where all nature invited to industry; t she was poor, where riches abounded on It is no exaggeration to say...
