Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Thomas Carlyle Carlyle s father and mother were strictly religious people. They belonged to a sect of Seceders from the old Scottish Kirk, and worshiped in a little rustic meeting-house. They were Calvinists of the old-fashioned type. Nine years of Carlyle s life were passed amid these home influences. When he was ten, his Ecclefechan teacher, who regarded him as a genius, having made good report of his progress, and his minister s son having introduced him to Latin, his father decided to send him to the grammar school at Annan, six miles distant. Here his instruction was mechanical, and only moderately good; his schoolmates, owing to his small size, his quiet, retiring habits, and his fidelity, long maintained, to a promise given his mother never to fight, treated him harshly, nick-named him the Tearful, and his time, as he said, was utterly wasted; an assertion which was scarcely true, since by means of some small store of curious reading, by going much to the craftsmen s workshops, and especially by the help of his...
